Introduction

The Nanomaterials for Energy and Environmental Applications 2027 will offer high-value networking opportunities, combining the rigor of scientific conferences with the practical relevance of industry trade shows. This event forms part of a broader relationship-building strategy, fostering ongoing dialogue and strong community engagement.

We will welcome distinguished speakers from leading industry firms, top research institutes, and academia, who will share fresh perspectives on the challenges and opportunities.

The conference will take place both in person and online, with a particular focus on industry participants, and will be hosted in the beautiful setting of a Cambridge college.

What to expect from this event

You will have the opportunity to meet key industrial leaders. It will provide you with a platform to exchange ideas, build new connections, and increase your organisation's visibility among stakeholders.
